UM OFFERS BRUSH-UP COURSES
FOR OLDER STUDENTS

Two courses to help older students returning to campus polish rusty skills will be offered fall quarter by the Center for Continuing Education at the University of Montana.

A course in basic writing skills will be taught by Jocelyn Siler, who will respond to students' individual needs and provide sound background for their future college work.

The class will meet for 10 weeks, starting Oct. 4, on Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 105 of the UM Liberal Arts Building.

An individualized reading efficiency course will be offered through the UM Reading Laboratory, with lab director Dick Cummins as instructor. This course is designed to improve study skills and reading speed and vocabulary.

The cost of each course is $50.

Further information is available at the center, room 107, Main Hall. The center's telephone number is 243-2900.
